to the Union,-they came here to hold offices, and it is their opinion that the longer the State is kept out of the Union the longer they will hold the offices. In this they make a voluntary confession of unworthiness, since they are afraid to trust the judgment of the people upon their claims to office ! Such is their evident policy; and all who know the men know that they will make no movement inconsistent with their personal interest. They have exerted all their influence and ingenuity to defeat any attempt to get a fair election, or to alter the Underwood constitution in any manner. If an election was to be had, they demanded that it should be held according to the plan of the Underwood convention; and if a constitution was to be adopted, they demanded that it should be the UNDERWOOD constitution-first, because the State was so gerrymandered by the convention as to throw the power in the hands of the negrees; and secondly, because under the UNDERWOOD constitution they would necessarily hold all the offices, as no citizen of the State who could not take the iron-clad oath would be eligible to office !

Quite sufficient reason for the ultras. So we have had them the past winter dogging the committees of Congress and buttonholing the members of that body, imploring them by no means to relax the harsh and rigid provisions of the UNDERWOOD constitution. With unexampled effrontery they solemnly declared that the people of Virginia were still rebellious, and that they could not be trusted with the rights of citizens!

Governor WELLS and his brethren do not at all desire an election in Virginia. This has been their position on the subject all the time; but they are less inclined now than ever, as they have had their ticket hopelessly damaged by the placing of a negro upon it. No set of men in this Union have a greater aversion for the negro than these men, and they fully appreciate the danger of going into an election with the dead weight of the negro for Lieutenant Governor fastened upon them. There will be no election if they can prevent it. On the other hand, the more respectable class of Republicans-those who are here to stay-who have interests to be benefited or destroyed by good or bad governmentthey are not for postponing the elections; they are not for prolonging the condition of uncertainty and paralysis of all the interests of the State. They desire to restore CURRIE, and owned by him and others, the State to the Union at as early a day as engaged in the coasting trade bepossible. They go further: they are for ending the day of intolerance and proscription; they would reënfranchise the white people of Virginia, and thus revive their energies and spirit, and restore to the Commonwealth their wisdom and experience. This is what these more liberal and honorable men are desirous of accomplishing.

We now have the worst of governments. It is neither civil nor military. The military is, indeed, the superior authority, but it is exerted only as superintending. It does not penetrate into the interior of official economy, and does not act upon mere questions of competency in office. It preserves order, fills the offices, and sees that the wheels of civil authority "go through the motion." That's all. Experienced men have been turned away by reason of ineligibility, and new-comers with little experience and less talent are filling their places pro forma.

This sort of government suits nobody but those who are in office. The intelligent Republicans who are here to reside, and who have something in the way of character as well as property to lose, are utterly opposed to its continuance. They heartily sympathize with the great body of the people in being wearied with delay and with longing for the day of deliverance. They are anxious to unite with all people who would put an end to the present state of things and restore good government to Virginia.

Surely with such dispositions and their overwhelming motives, strength enough may be concentrated to crush the party of plunderers and give us a government which will inspire confidence and revive prospe-

The Senate and the President. The Senate Judiciary Committee reports the House bill repealing the tenure-ofoffice law with an amendment which proposes only to suspend the law until the next meeting of Congress. This would simply be putting the President on his good behavior; or, as in some of the churches, taking him "on trial." If what he does in the interim is not satisfactory the law will be continued.

Whether the Senate will adopt the amendment of the committee remains to be seen. If they do, the House assuredly will not; and the Senate's action in that case will probably give more offence to General GRANT than if they had done nothing. Congress has had a great deal of power of late, and power is a thing not generally surrendered without a struggle. Fortunately the House of Representatives foolishly surrendered into the hands of the Senate the entire control over the appointing power (the most important of all to Congress) by passing the tenure-of-office law, and is therefore forced into hostility to the Senate and alliance with the President in his desire to be relieved from subordination to the Senate. This will probably facilitate the ultimate restoration of the Executive Department to its true dignity and relief from the interference and dictation of Congress.

The New Ticket. The State Executive Committee of the Republican party supporting the new ticket is announced in the local columns of one. We are glad to see that a brief exponouncement, in which is embraced "a " speedy removal of all political disabilities " from every citizen of Virginia." This street between Main and Franklin. certainly commends the new ticket and its supporters to increased consideration and Virginia. We look upon this new demon- E astern POTATOES.—150 barrels in Store for sale by [mh 16] A. S. LEE. respect amongst their fellow-citizens of stration as an encouraging sign of the tendency to conciliation and harmony-that condition which is an indespensable precedent to restoration, equality, and peace.

THE MILITARY .- The appointments of General GRANT include several general officers, and the prospect is that the number will be increased. The politicians don't like this. They don't fancy the proximity of arms; they have a horror of swords! But they have no right to complain. They have been carrying the country to the devil, and it is time that a change should take place. An infusion of generals into the civil government will have s salutary effect. It will exert a wholesome restraint and promote the efficiency and order of the administration. "Things are working!"

THE GRANT FAMILY .- We are sorry that the GRANT family is not large enough to fill all the principal offices of the nation. The Government would be all the better for being made a "family affair" instead of a partisan affair, in which the honor and emoluments are given to mercenaries.

A Little Sign.

A sale of property was announced in this paper on yesterday morning which may be hailed as a sign of coming events. It was no great movement; but, with all its circumstances, it is one that is encouraging, bearing as it does upon a most important interest and having a right direction.

This was the sale of the marine railway and lot where it is located, together with the hull of the unfinished vessel on the stocks near it. The purchaser was the celebrated shipwright Mr. John G. ABRAHAMS, of Baltimore. The unfinished vessel was commenced just before the war, when Richmond was on the high tide of prosperity, with a grand future before her. Mr. ABRAHAMS was the builder, and she was destined for the Virginia and Liverpool line, just then established by some of our most enterprizing citizens, who had but a little while before sent forth their first ship, the Virginia Dare, which was caught in Europe by the war, and was there sold. Mr. ABRAHAMS will now finish this vessel, which has so long slept upon the stocks.

Richmond is an eligible locality for shipbuilding, and is a point from which a most prosperous foreign trade may be conducted. Our people found this out before the war, and their enterprise was rapidly moving in that direction. We have no doubt of the revival of this spirit, and look upon the sale of property to Mr. ABRAHAMS as the first step towards it.

Before the war we had thirteen fine ships and brigs (clipper built) engaged in the Rio trade. All save one or two of them were captured by the Federal navy and confiscated. We had twenty-four or five very large square-sail schooners, built under the superintendence of DAVID tween Richmond and northern ports. All these vessels were built, we believe, by Mr. ABRAHAMS. They were admirable vesselsvery fleet, and finer specimens of marine architecture were seldom seen.

We have the same motives for embarking in this commerce now that we had then, but not the same means. We will have to wait awhile; but that we shall ere long have the means we do not doubt. Indeed, in a few years we shall have direct communication with the Ohio and Mississippi through the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Virginia and Tennessee lines. when we shall have it in our power to supply the West with the coffee which we shall be able to bring in return for our flour, which must ever take the lead as the favorite breadstuff of South America.

Mr. ABRAHAMS will immediately repair the railway, so that ships may be examined and repaired here; and we hope to see the yard attached to it appropriated to shipbuilding. We have the timber in Virginia, and soon we shall have a variety of mills and forges here that will give the shipwright everything needed in his trade immediately at hand.

Let no man despond and ask where and how. But let every one think and act as though these things were certain. The storm cannot last-the clouds must be dispelled-and who says there will not be a bright day then? We should be so certain of this that we may picture in our mind's eye the bright future of Richmond-her busy multitudes, her active commerce, her hundreds of factories and blazing chimneys, and her port full of shipping. To work patiently and steadily with this scene constantly portrayed in the future is the certain way to its realization.

How He Won Her. A Sequel to Fair Play. By Mrs. EMMA D. E. N. EOUTH-WORTH. Philadelphia: T. B. PETERSON & Co.

Mrs. Southworth has her admirers. To these this new book of her's-this sequel to "Fair Play"-will be welcome. If we take a comment upon "How He Won Her," which lies before us, as authority, it is, indeed, a great achievement. From this we learn that " How He Won Her" " abounds "in thrilling incidents and the most beau-'tiful scenic descriptions; increases in 'interest at every step; and culminates in 'a startling manner." This is quite exhaustive.
